

About Let's Gogh Art

After founding an arts & crafts studio in 2003, Lynn Toomey, chief creativity officer, got the idea for Let's Gogh Art in 2005 when she was asked to offer an art activity at a local recreation program. This was later followed by a request to offer crafts at a company outing. Before long, Lynn's "part-time" endeavor had turned into several events, classes and outings, with rave reviews. With inspiration from Vincent van Gogh, one of Lynn's five year old twins came up with the company's unique name.

Let's Gogh Art provides mobile art-based classes, events and parties at all types of venues, including: companies, schools, daycare and community centers, camps, libraries and private homes. Let's Gogh Art is now expanding through a national licensing program. Perfect for those who want to be their own boss, work from home and "create some fun" everyday! For more information & territories, visit: www.letsoghart.com.

Let's Gogh Art's mission is to show people how to tap into their imagination with art-based activities, while experiencing the connection between art, creativity and the amazing world we live in.

"No matter your age, the process of creating art is imaginative and playful. The end result is a unique masterpiece to call your own."
